Deat So-Having a desire to discharge my obligations to you, as well as to promote good to sufering humanity. I herewith end you for publication an extraordinary care of cure effected by means of your Hygeian Vegetable Universal Medicine, in the person of any son, Ralph, aged about thirteen years; in which I shall endeavor to be us brief as possible, that you may be enabled to make it more extensively known. Whilst in Edinburgh, my matire place, mure than two years ugo, he received a stroke on the elhow with a rule, as extere as to create in the joint what was termed by physicians an inflammation of the hone, from which he has suffered severe pain until within a short time past. He has been treated by some of the most entinent physicians in Scotland, which tended but little to ameliorate his suferings; consequently I despaired of his cver again having the former advantage in the use of his afflicted arm. Happily I was at length induced to make trial of the medicine in question; from which in a few days to be the experienced considerable relief, afterwards his complaint assumed a more aggravated form, in the breaking out, I suppose, of purtied or acrid themore around the all others, and the complete success that us in all cases attended its application. He has associated with him Mr. J. Sinclair, recently one of his pupils, as an anistant. By this arrangement, ladies will be taught in a separate class.

Terms from 25 to 50 dullars, according to the nature of the case and the situation of the applicant. A curse in all cases will be guaranteed or the money will be refunded.

That damps my bryw;
It is not for another bresth
I ask thee new;
I can die with a lip unstir
And a quite hearte.

Let but this prayer be heard
Ere I depart.

I can give up my mother's look
My sister's kiss;
I can think of love—yet brook
A death like this!
I can give up the young fame
I burn'd to win—
All—but the spotless name
I glory in!

Thine is the power to give,
Thine to dony,
Joy for the hour I live—
Calmness to die.
By all the brave should cherish,
By my dying breath,
I ask that I may perish
By a soldier's death!

The description, from Silliman's Journal, of the nature and formation of Coal will probably be new to many:

"The immense beds of bituminous coal found in the valley of the Ohio, fill the mind with wonder and surprise, as it reflects on the vast forests of aborescent and sandstone, until the whole series had accumulated plants required in their formation. Age after hge, successive growths of plants, springing up in the same region, were entombed beneath thick strata of shale to the depth of more than a thousand feet; while beneath the whole lay the bed of an ocean floored with fossil salt. Indications of coal are found at intervals across the great valley from the Allephany to the Rocky, Mountains. It is found near the surface in Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illimois and Missouri, and without doubt may be found beneath the extensive territory deposits, which form the substratum of the great prairies in the central and northern parts of the western states. As low down as New Madeiria on the Mississippi, coal was thrown up from beneath the bed of the river, by the great earthquake of 1812—a sufficient proof of its continuation in the most depressed part of the great valley.

That coal is of vegetable origin, no one who has read much on the subject, or personally examined the coal beds, will now deny. Time was, when it was considered a peculiar mineral product, formed in the earth in the same manner and at the same time with the rocks that surround it. The product of its chemical analysis, being altogether vegetable, and the artificial formation of coal from wood by Sir James Hall, have silenced all doubts on the subject. The only mystery now is,—how such vast quantities of vegetable matter could be accumulated and grow on the spot where they were buried. That they grew in general, on the surface now occupied by the coal, appears certain from the perfect state in which the most delicate leaves and streams are preserved. Had they been transported by currents of water, and especially from any distance, it is hardly poss

Hair Culting.—A writer in the Medical Intelligencer of this week, talks very sensibly against the present fashion of cropping short the hair on the back part of the head and neck. He says—

"In olden times, when wigs were worn, our grandfathers were used to live all the days of their lives;—
now, we are formante if we live them half out; and these are filled up with suffering and disease. Every anatomist knows that, forth from behind the head, issues that large but most delicate and susceptible organ, the spinal cord. It traverses the whole length of the back, and, from every point of it, nerves go out and penetrate and encircle the body. On the integrity of this organ depends the health and vigor of the greater portion of the trunk and extremities; and the certainty with which a vast number of painful but little understood diseases can be traced to disorder in this "silver cord," has been beautifully and forcibly illustrated in the recent work of Mr. Teale—a book which is full of practical wisdom, and valuable to every medical practitioner.

Now if any part of the living fabric requires to be the recent work of Mr. Teale—a book which is full of practical wisdom, and valuable to every medical practitioner.

Now if any part of the living fabric requires to be guarded against exposure, it is the spinal cord—especially at the point of its out-coming from the skull. Yet, what do we see in the streets of every city and town and village! Amid the chill blasts of winter, we see the head warmly protected by a close hat or a fur cap, and the back well covered by warm and comfortable garments; but this very spot, the back of the head and neck, between the collar and the cap, left exposed to the cold, to the wind and the storm. As if studious to open as widely as possible this broad avenue of disease, the warm covering that a kind and careful Providence had provided for this part, is almost impiously cut short by the universal fushion of the day, and hence come a host of obscure, painful and fatal diseases, that were rarely witnessed until this mode of hair-cutting was adopted.

I ask not for the restoration of the venerable wig, though I believe in my heart it was a great promoter of health, but I do entreat the public, as they value health and long life, to abandon this abominable practice, and follow the dictates of science, and the teachings of Natsir, who has furnished for this critical portion of the body a warm and abundant covering."

Police, Wednesday — James Eyers, George Dugan, John Gould, and Peter H. McEvoy, four young rascals, the leader, the eldest, not fifteen years of age, were arrested by Messrs. Weich and Brink. They had obtained the key of Mr. Norris' door (on the corner of Wall and Broad street) in the day time, and on shutting up in the evening, although the key was missed nothing was said or thought about it. During the night, these boys entered the office, and robbed it of about 70 dollars in cash. The evening following they contrived to enter the office of the Sanday Morning News, but that being an editor's office nothing of course was found, and to revenge themselves for the disappointment, they attempted to set fire to the premises by carrying the coal from the grate, and setting fire to a quantity of papers, lying in a corner of the room. A want of air alone prevented the fire from extending and thus saved a large portion of the lower part of the city from being burnt. They were sent to the House of Refuge to be kept until their trial comes on at the next term of the Sessions.
